PRESENTATION OF DJIBOUTI

Djibouti is a small country located in the Horn of Africa, bordered by Eritrea to the north, Ethiopia to the west and south, and Somalia to the east. It also has a maritime frontage on the Gulf of Aden and the Bab el Mandeb Strait, which makes it an important strategic position geopolitically.

Here are some highlights about Djibouti:

- Capital: The capital of Djibouti is Djibouti City, located on the southern coast of the country.
- Languages: Arabic and French are the official languages of the country, although several local languages are also spoken, including Afar and Somali.
- Population: Djibouti has approximately 1 million inhabitants. The population is diverse, made up of several ethnic groups, including Afars, Somalis and Arabs.
- Economy: Djibouti's economy is largely based on trade and services. The country is home to one of the most strategic ports in the region, the Port of Doraleh, which is an important entry point for maritime trade to and from the Red Sea and the Indian Ocean. Djibouti is also a regional center for financial and commercial activities.
- Geopolitics: Due to its strategic geographic position, Djibouti hosts several foreign military bases, including American, French, Chinese and Japanese bases. These bases demonstrate the importance of Djibouti as a hub for military and security operations in the region.
- Environment: Djibouti is mainly desert, with high temperatures throughout the year. Major geographic features include arid plains, mountains, and deserts. Despite its arid climate, Djibouti is home to unique biodiversity, particularly in mountainous and coastal areas.
- Culture: Djiboutian culture is influenced by a combination of African, Arab and French traditions. Traditional music, dance and cuisine reflect this cultural diversity.

In summary, Djibouti is a small country with great strategic importance due to its geographical position. Despite its economic and environmental challenges, Djibouti continues to play a crucial role as a center of trade, logistics and security in the Horn of Africa region.

DAY 5

Djibouti, on the Horn of Africa, is a predominantly French- and Arabic-speaking country that offers arid bush, volcanic formations and beaches on the Gulf of Aden. Located in the Danakil Desert, the shallow-water Lake Assal is one of the saltiest bodies of water in the world. The nomadic Afar people live along Lake Abbe, a salty aquatic expanse with chimney-like mineral formations.

At 750 meters above sea level, perched on a mountain with soft, pleasant air to sniff, the town of Arta is located 42 km from the city of Djibouti.

Given the positioning of the Republic of Djibouti on the rift, a seismic detection station is located in this city to list and exchange data with similar stations around the world.

This region is known for its cool climate, its hiking sites, its sumptuous beach for swimming and whale shark observation. Among its distractions, every year, Djiboutians go to this unmissable event of the big march called "Peace Walk".

From Djibouti City, it takes an hour and a half to reach the Lake Assal site which attracts geologists and volcanologists from all over the world. Lake Assal is in fact located less than 157m below sea level, it is the lowest point of Africa and the lake which contains the highest rate of salinity (approx 348g/l) with an ice floe of 65 km² salt and hot water springs. An idyllic landscape where the pale green of the lake, the immaculate white of the salt and the blue sky intertwine: a painting and a poetry at the same time.

At the extreme tip of the Gulf of Tadjoura, Goubet Al-Kharab is a magnificent and disturbing cove dominated by Devil's Island, an impressive dome which sprang up in the middle of the bay during the tectonic movements linked to the formation of the Rift of Assal. Accessible by the road that dominates it or by boat, Goubet has always suffered from an evil reputation, so much so that no Djiboutian fisherman would still risk his boat there today!

Under the dome would in fact sleep the abyss of demons, a lair of monstrous marine creatures who, like mermaids, would pull to the bottom the daring ones daring to venture there. The site, it is true, is something to strike the imagination, surrounded by arid mountains which descend directly
